GM LEVON ARONIAN & GM MAURICE ASHLEY INTERVIEW // LENNART OOTES

As we inch closer and closer to the grand finale, the competition for first place is getting close. As Maxime Vachier-Lagrave's preparation failed to bring him home the full point, he was joined by Levon Aronian and Viswanathan Anand, both of whom won their games. The three are leading the tournament with 4.5/7 and are being chased by Magnus Carlsen who is only half a point behind. The tournament still remains wide open as several of the leaders will meet in the following two rounds. The players have once again proved that they came here to play and are not shying away from taking risks. The next two days promise to bring even more excitement!

GM VISWANATHAN ANAND - GM IAN NEPOMNIACHTCHI

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN

GM ANAND VS. GM NEPOMNIACHTCHI
// LENNART OOTES

The former World Champion scored his second victory of the tournament after his opponent completely collapsed. The game was a theoretical Najdorf where Anand once again chose a line that he has championed. His opponent was well prepared and the game was balanced throughout until Nepomniachtchi decided to give up a pawn for active counterplay in the rook endgame instead of playing defensively. Unfortunately for him, the counterplay did not offer enough and he soon found himself in a lost position with less material.

GM HIKARU NAKAMURA - GM LEVON ARONIAN

BY WGM TATEV ABRAHAMYAN, ANNOTATIONS BY GM CRISTIAN CHIRILA

Levon Aronian chose a complicated and double-edged line in the English Opening. His opening choice indicated that even with the Black pieces he was ready to fight and wanted that full point. Aronian was able to handle the complications of the position better and always had the upper hand. In an already-difficult position, matters became even worse for Nakamura after he missed a tactical shot which was spotted by his opponent immediately. In a bishop against knight endgame, where Aronian had the bishop and the extra pawn, the four-time U.S. champion was forced to resign. He now finds himself at the bottom of the standings along with Ian Nepomniachtchi and Wesley So.

[The most spectacular game of the round was by far the already famed battle between Nakamura and Aronian, two players that have tested each other's will throughout the years and have managed to build quite a rivalry due to their dynamic and contrarian (at times) styles. Let's see how this year's Sinquefeld rematch went!]

1.c4 Nf6 2.Nc3 e5 3.Nf3 Nc6 4.g3 Bb4 [4...d5 Leads to the reversed-Dragon type of structures, which are theoretically abundant and rich in their nuances]

5.Bg2 0-0 6.0-0 e4 7.Ng5 [7.Ne1 Bxc3 8.bxc3 Re8 9.f3 d5 10.cxd5 Nxd5÷ Might have been Aronian's improvement over his game vs Nepomniachtchi from Leuven (10...Qxd5 11.fxe4 Nxe4 12.Qb3 Qh5 13.Nd3² 1-0 (51) Nepomniachtchi,I (2766)-Aronian,L (2780) Leuven 2017)]

7...Bxc3 8.bxc3 Re8 9.f3 [White needs to open the center in order to take advantage of his bishop pair]

9...e3 10.d3 [10.dxe3?! d6 11.Rb1 b6°]

as well as the ongoing control over the d4 square. The game continuation is quite reckless 17...Rg6 18.c4 Nde7 19.g4 Black's Ns are completely restrained 19...h5 20.Kh1 A very nice prophylactic move 20...hxc4 21.fxg4 Bxg4 22.Rxf4±]

GM MAXIME VACHIER-LAGRAVE - GM SERGEY KARJAKIN

GM SERGEY KARJAKIN
// LENNART OOTES

This was definitely the wildest affair of the round! Karjakin played a novelty that Vachier-Lagrave was well aware of and prepared against. Karjakin later admitted that he reviewed the line an hour before the game but had a hard time remembering any of it. The resulting position was such that gave Black many opportunities to make a mistake and lose the game in truly phenomenal fashion. The Russian Grandmaster was able to figure out the ins and outs of the position over the board and save the half-point. Later in a tweet, Karjakin posted that he had everything until move 38 in his notes but had to spend all his time trying to remember it.

1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.Bb5 Nf6 4.0-0 Nxe4 [For the first time in this tournament, we see the Berlin wall make an appearance!]

5.d4 Nd6 6.Bxc6 dxc6 7.dxe5 Nf5 8.Qxd8+ Kxd8 [This position is a common occurrence at the top levels. Lately, most players have been playing the Italian instead of the Spanish but the Berlin wall is still one of the biggest opening trends]

9.h3 Ke8 10.Nc3 h5 11.Bf4 Be7 12.Rad1 Be6 13.Ng5 [one of the advantages Black has in this position is his bishop pair, so White would really like to eliminate one of them. The problems for Black are the doubled c pawn and the king. For White the problem is the pawn on e5, which makes Black's light squared bishop a monster]

13...Rh6 14.Rfe1 Bb4 15.g4 [White has a pawn majority on the kingside, so that's where he will play]

15...hxc4 16.hxc4 Ne7 17.Nxe6 Rxe6 18.Kg2 Bxc3 19.bxc3 Rd8 20.Rxd8+ Kxd8 21.Rh1 Nd5 22.Bg3 Rh6 [Novelty that forces the position. Both players knew the crazy variations that ensued]

23.Rxh6 gxh6 [this position is very critical. White is basically giving up the queenside while marching his king over to the kingside, capturing the h pawn and trying to queen the e pawn]

24.Kh3 Nxc3 25.Kh4 Nxa2 26.Kh5 Nc3 27.Kxh6 a5 28.f4 a4 [It looks like the a pawn is running but the fact that the king is on d8 gives white a tempo as the e pawn will move to e7 with a check]

29.f5 Ke8! [only move. There is a lot of move for Black to err]

GM WESLEY SO - GM FABIANO CARUANA

GM WESLEY SO VS. GM FABIANO CARUANA // LENNART OOTES

The U.S. Champion has had a very tough tournament so far after losing two games back to back. In the postgame interview, he admitted that the losses are taking their toll on him and the past few days have been very difficult for him psychologically. He tried to remember the rest of the tournament and treated this game as the first round of a new event. The game was quite solid and uneventful as neither side tried to press for a win. Of course, it is usually White's choice to dictate the course of the game and Wesley So simply wanted to recover with a draw, which he achieved without any trouble. Caruana is quite a bit behind the leaders but felt that today was not the round to go all out.

GM PETER SVIDLER - GM MAGNUS CARLSEN

GM PETER SVIDLER
// LENNART OOTES

It was the second time in this tournament that Magnus Carlsen faced the Scotch Opening, but this time with a different result. Once again, the World Champion had the upper hand but was unable to convert the extra pawn in the endgame. Unlike yesterday, the defense by his opponent was a lot more straight-forward and Carlsen did not try very hard to win, as he knew it wouldn't be fruitful. In the postgame interview, he was asked how he overcame yesterday's disappointment. He felt very remorseful about overlooking the critical point in the game but still remains optimistic about his chances.

[In what was one of the most important match-ups of the round, Svidler decided to avoid the conventional openings paths and go for the risky Scotch. The imbalanced resulting position was a two way street in which both players tried to exert strategic pressure over the other. In the end, Carlsen's pressure wasn't enough to create any real dangers and the two agreed to a draw. Let's see how all this happened!]
